Jayhawk File Express Plugs into SubTropolis

Document management firm helps bring Hunt Midwest's total underground record storage footprint to almost 1 million square feet

KANSAS CITY, MO – April 25, 2016 – Jayhawk File Express, a Topeka-based document management company, has entered the Kansas City market with a 36,000-square-foot lease in Hunt Midwest's SubTropolis, the world's largest underground business complex.

"SubTropolis' climate-controlled, secure environment is the ideal setting for our clients' most sensitive document storage needs," said Cheryl Creviston, president and CEO of Jayhawk File Express. "Our new Kansas City-area location will help Jayhawk File Express continue to deliver value to our customers in our key areas of compliance, continuity and cost."

Jayhawk File Express is among a growing number of archival and document storage companies that have opted to take advantage of SubTropolis' hardened, 70° environment with 24/7 security. Other tenants include the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), Underground Vaults & Storage and Recall.

Besides offering an ideal setting for document storage facilities, SubTropolis offers record storage tenants the ability to expand their footprint quickly to accommodate growing demand.

"Because SubTropolis is located underground, companies don't have to wade through a time-consuming permitting process. Instead, companies can enjoy speed-to-market for new leases and expansions," said Mike Bell, Hunt Midwest vice president and general manager of industrial/commercial real estate.
